Course Outline

You will develop skills which let you achieve your own design principle when designing from shape, material, function and context. You will learn how to sketch, work with different materials and deliver tangible fashion products. An essential part of this is exploring and developing your own creative process. You will learn to communicate this in both word and image. Your vision of fashion will not only be expressed in garments, but also in other media such as photography and film. After completing the course you will be ready to decide for yourself where you want to be in the fashion world and which path you want to follow.

Course modules:

- Contextual studies (incl. museum visits, essay writing, the history of art and design and the teachings of the contemporary world).
- Visual studies (incl. experimental drawing, film, photography, fashion styling, Adobe).
- Fashion Design (incl. design development, 3D resolution process, fabric selection, design, sampling, knitwear techniques).
- Studio practice (incl. pattern cutting, production techniques, sewing).
- Fashion Business (incl. international marketing, branding, communications).
